Step 1: Welcome to the Thames Path. This walk follows the South Bank of the iconic National Trail from Tower Bridge to Greenland Pier.

Step 2: The nearest tube and railway station to the start of this walk is London Bridge station. Buses 47, 343, 381, N199 and N381 stop at Hays Galleria (Stop H), if you're getting public transport to the start of this walk.

Step 3: Start at Tower Bridge with the river on your left and walk along Shad Thames.

Step 4: Turn left into Maggie Blake's Cause, an alleyway connecting Shad Thames with the riverfront.

Did you know?

Named after a local community activist the alleyway represents a significant victory - public access to the riverside in a predominantly privately-owned environment.

Step 5: Enjoy the views of Tower Bridge as you reach the water once again.

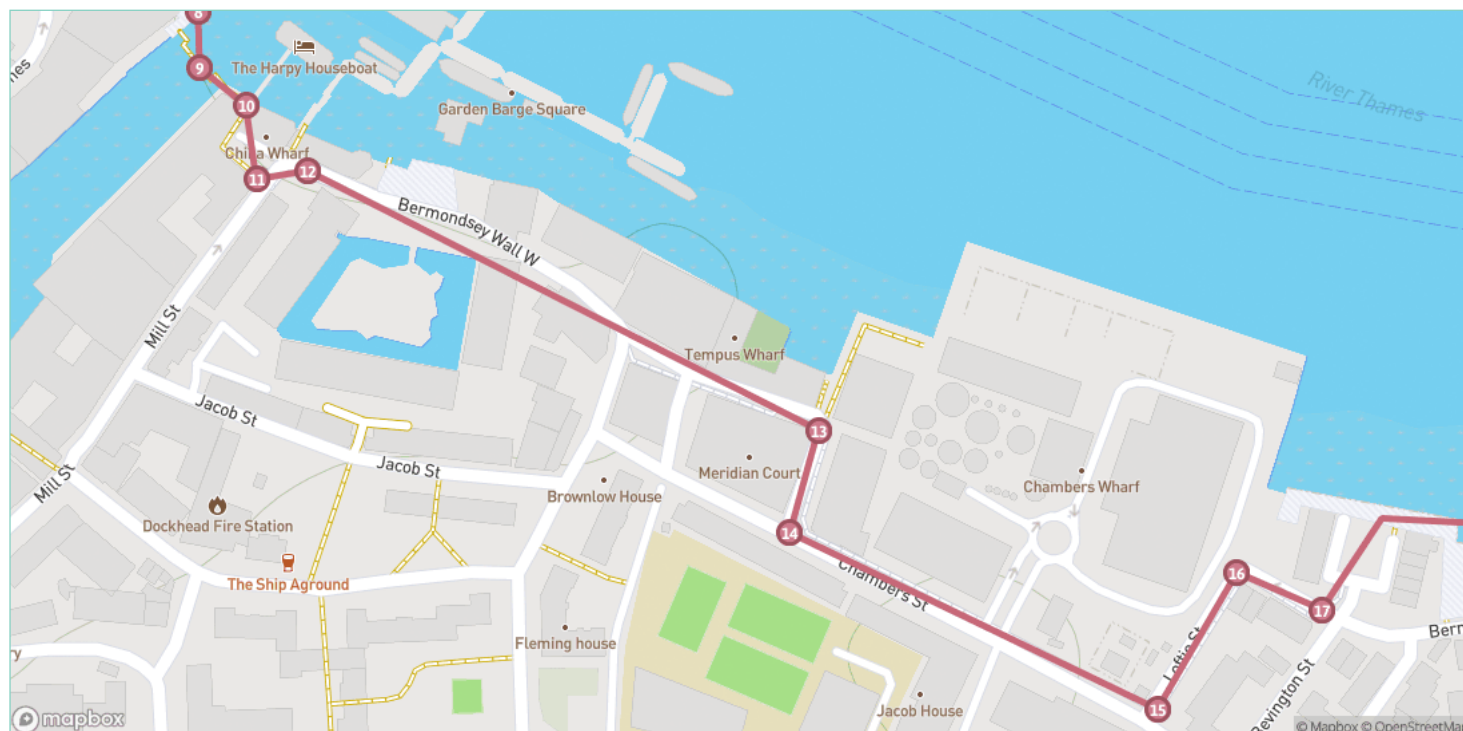

Step 6: Turn right to continue walking along the Thames.

Step 7: Walk through to the river frontage of Butler's Wharf. Imposing Victorian warehouses have now turned into riverside restaurants and apartments.

Step 8: Cross the stainless steel footbridge at the entrance to St. Saviour's Dock, an atmospheric inlet of warehouses and tidal mud.

Did you know?

St. Saviours Dock displayed the bodies of pirates who were captured and hanged here. It is here that Bill Sykes, in Charles Dickens' novel Oliver Twist, falls from a roof and dies in the mud. Dickens gives a vivid description of the dock.

Step 9: Head across the bridge to New Concordia Wharf and Jacob's Island Pier.

Did you know?

This is the part of Bermondsey which Charles Dickens described as, "the filthiest, strangest and most extraordinary of the many localities that are hidden in London".

Step 10: After crossing the inlet to St. Saviour's, the Thames Path goes through and under the building on the river frontage.

Step 11: Follow the narrow ramped path down to Mill Street.

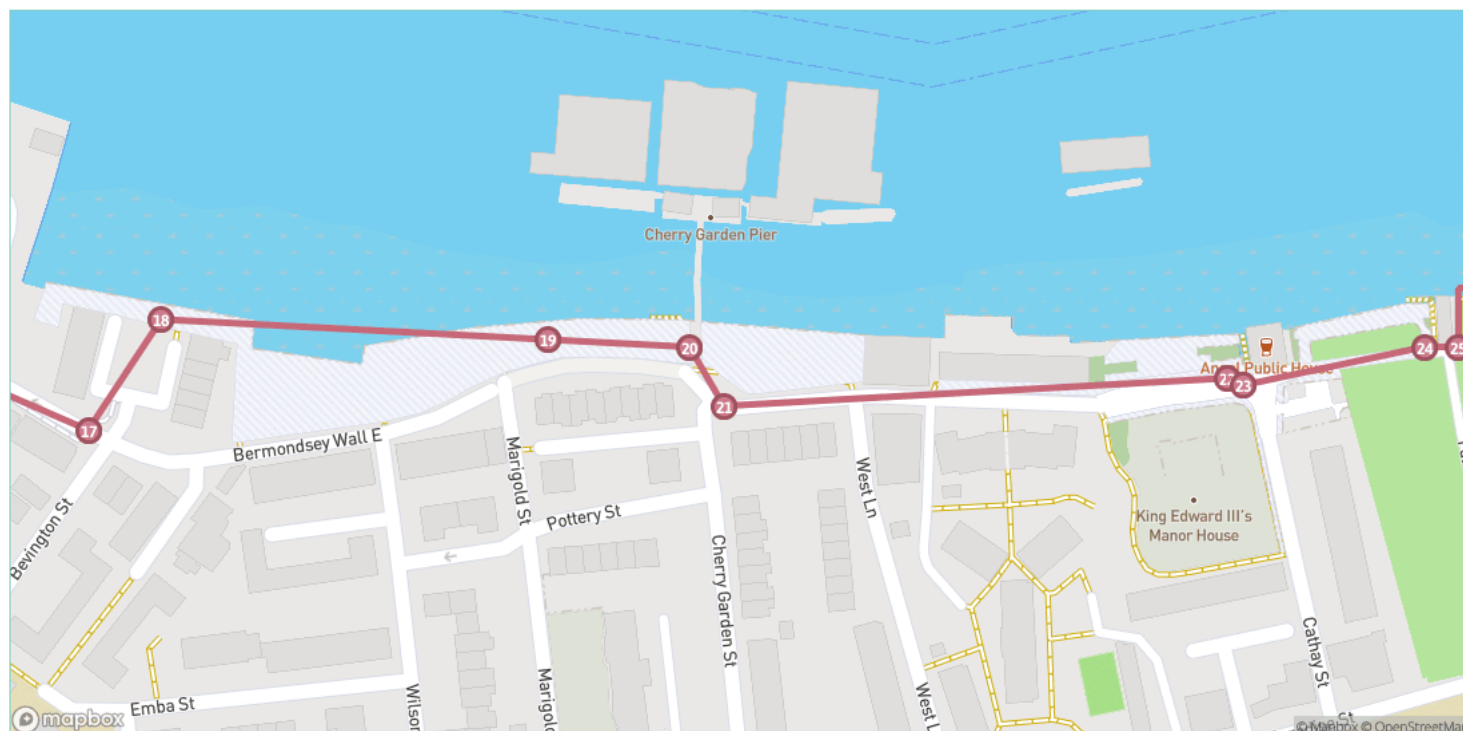

Step 12: Then carry on straight ahead along Bermondsey Wall West. The river is mainly hidden by old warehouses here.

Step 19: The walkway widens at it approaches the pier by Bermondsey Beach and there are many tree planters for shade.

Step 20: At Cherry Garden Pier, turn right to head back to the road via the metal barriers.

Step 21: Turn left to continue along Bermondsey Wall East.

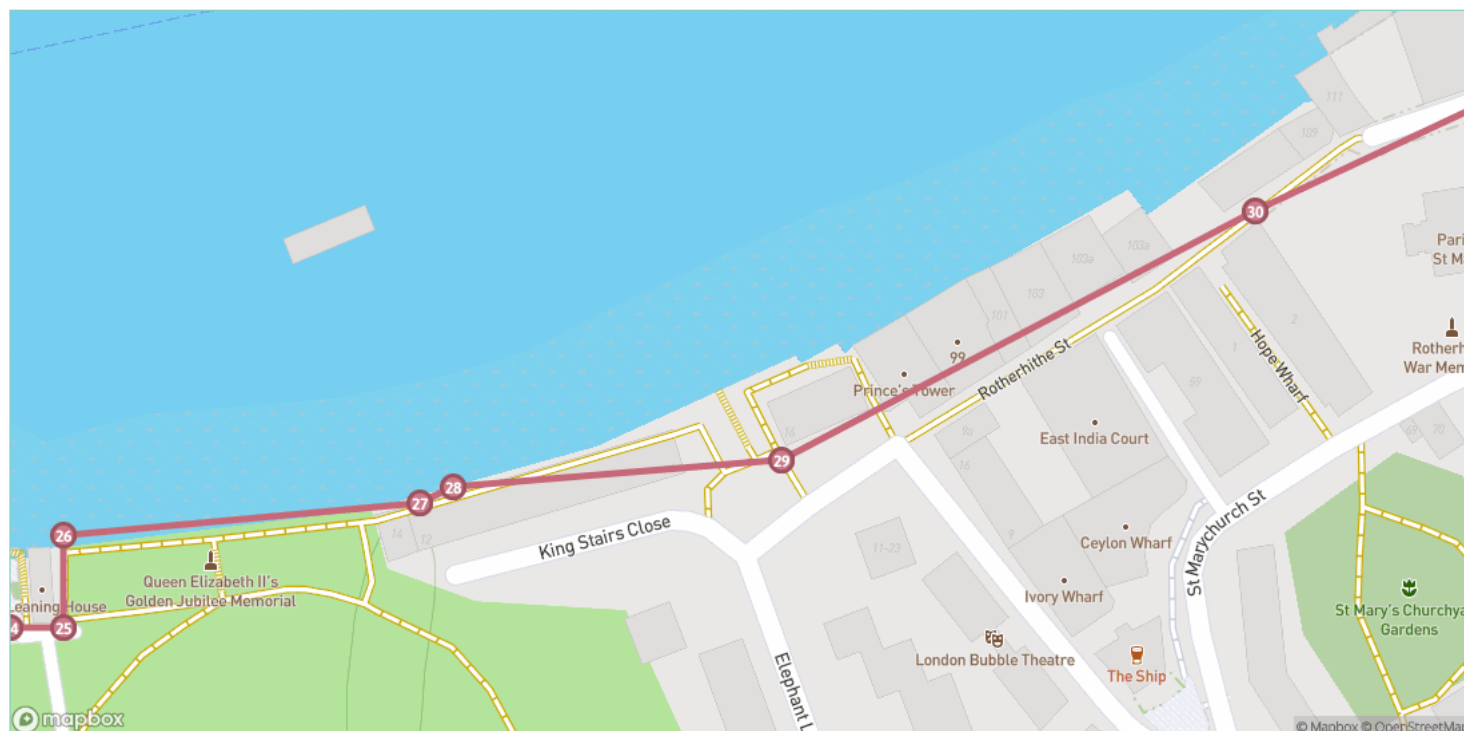

Step 22: At the end of the road you'll reach The Angel pub on your left.

Step 23: To the right of The Angel pub there is a sunken grassy space which hides the remains of the 14th-century moated manor house of Edward III.

Did you know?

King Edward III, who reigned from 1327 - 77 built a residence in Rotherhithe. Part of the walls still stand today!

Step 24: Follow the road straight past the pub onto the pedestrian path.

Step 25: On your left, take the ramp past the barriers back up to the river.

Step 26: These are the lovely King's Stairs Gardens, named after the stairs that served Edward III's palace.

Did you know?

The stairs also served generations of watermen and the mudlarks who scavenged along the river at low tide. The word mudlark was originally used to name the children in Victorian London who were forced by desperate poverty to scour the Thames foreshore for items to sell for a few pence - such things as bits of coal and rope, discarded iron, copper nails, old bones (ground up for fertiliser) and lost tools.

Step 27: From King's Stairs Gardens carry on ahead, with the river on the left.

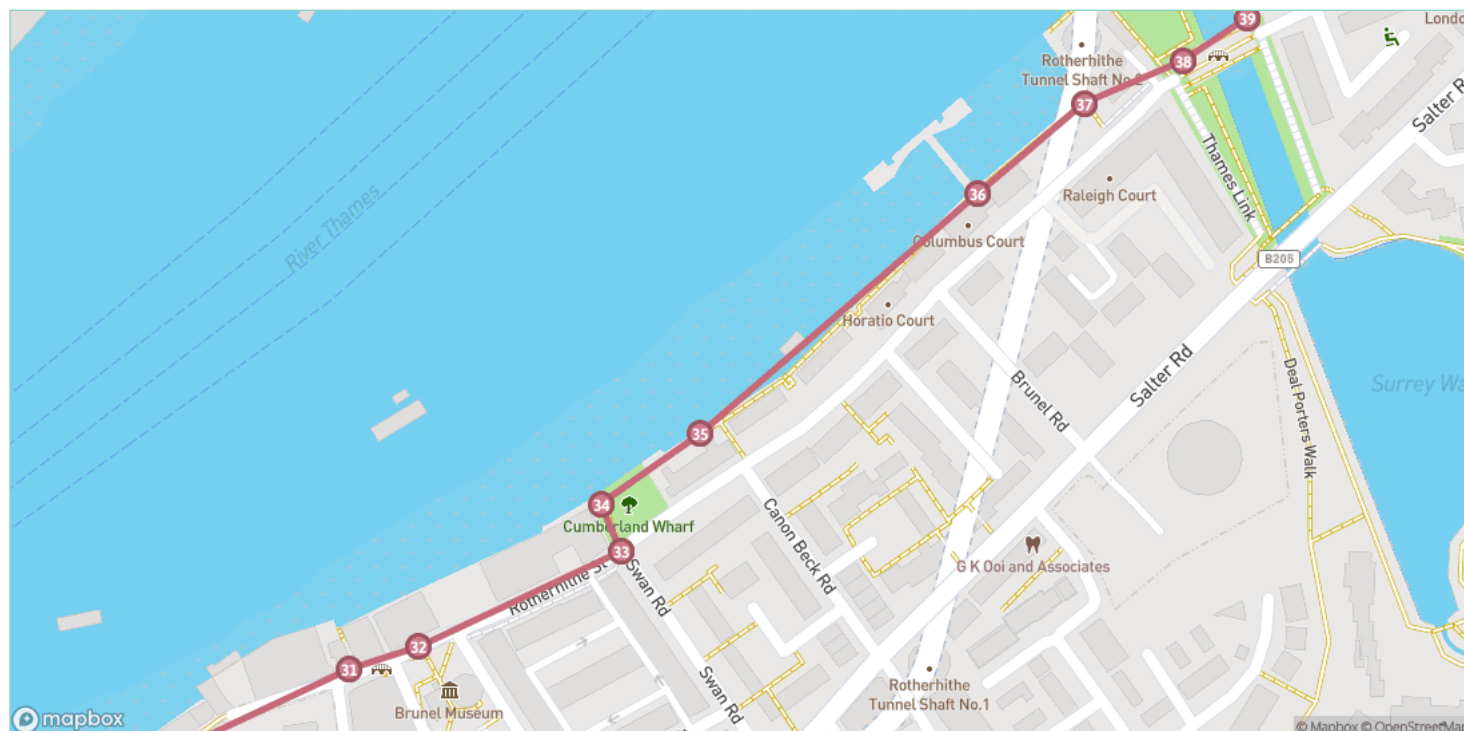

Did you know?

On the north bank of the Thames you can see across to the Execution Dock. Here the notorious Captain Kidd, who had been convicted of piracy and murder, was executed on in 1701.

Step 28: Go through a narrow passage between warehouses linked by overhead bridges.

Step 29: After the warehouses, pass through the barriers to get back to the road. Turn left to continue on Elephant Lane then Rotherhithe Street.

Did you know?

The pub is named after the famous ship which carried the Pilgrim Fathers to America in 1620, and which began its epic journey from its mooring near here, returning to London the following year. The Last Will and Testament of the Mayflower crew is displayed in the bar and the passenger list is on show in the restaurant upstairs.

Step 32: Just beyond the pub is Brunel Museum.

Did you know?

During the construction of Brunel's Thames Tunnel this building was the engine house which pumped out water. The Thames Tunnel was the first tunnel ever built under a navigable river. Today it is used by trains between Rotherhithe and Wapping on the London Overground.

Step 33: At the junction with Swan Road, look for a signpost next to the trees on the left. Turn left through a small garden area to reach the river.

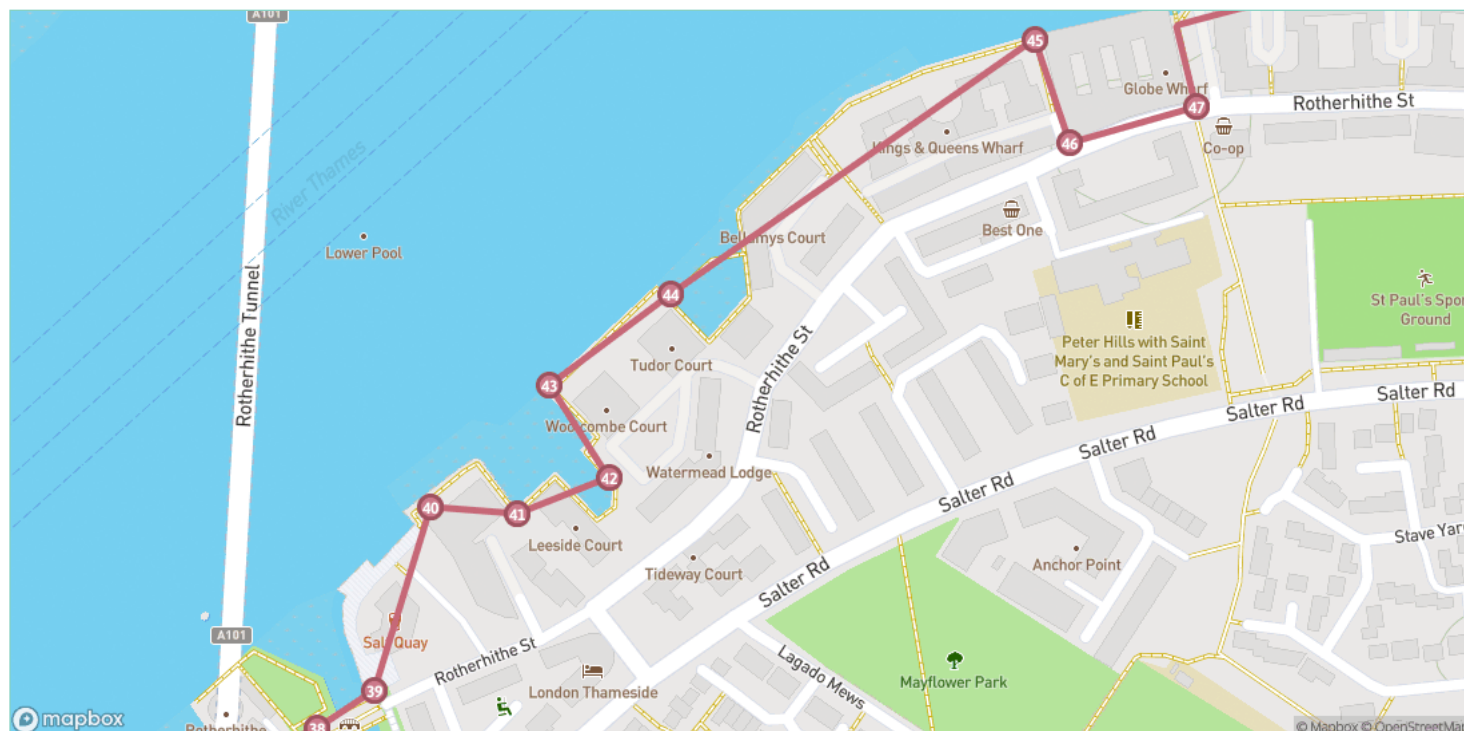

Step 34: This sculpture represents the ghost of William Bradford, the famous governor of the New Plymouth Colony.

Step 51: Continue riverside with clear views to the tower blocks Canary Wharf's financial centre.

Did you know?

Created in the 17th century to serve the Royal Dockyards at Deptford, Greenland Dock later became a base for Arctic whalers - hence its name.

Step 70: Turn left once you have crossed the water to continue along the riverside path towards the Tide Gauge House.

Step 71: For lock operations, the people on duty needed to know the exact state of the tide. In this house, a tide gauge monitored the water height.

Step 72: Along the river you'll soon reach Greenland Pier where this section ends.

Did you know?

This whole peninsula took the biggest pounding of any British docks in World War II. South Dock was pumped out and used to build the concrete caissons for the 'Mulberry Harbours', used in the D-Day landings, and named after Mulberry Quay.

Step 73: You've now completed this section of the Thames Path. How about moving on to the next section towards Greenwich Power Station?
